FIVE POINTS ON MONEY.

First—That there is not a free coinage country in the world to-day that is not on a silver basis.
Second—That there is not a gold-standard country in the world to-day that does not use silver as money along with gold.
Third—That there is not a silver-standard country in the world to-day that uses any gold as money along with silver.
Fourth—That there is not a silver-standard country in the world to-day that has more than one-third as much money in circulation per capita as the United States have and.
Fifth—That there is not a silver-standard country in the world to-day where the laboring man receives fair pay for his day's work.—John G. Carlisle, Secretary of the Treasury.

FROM BRYAN'S PAPER.

No people except the greedy owners of silver mines, anxious to make lucre out of profits, are interested in coinage at the ratio of 1 to 16.—Omaha World-Herald, July 31, 1893.

Sound Money Democrats.

Those who attended the state convention of the National Democratic party, held here Saturday, were impressed with its character as well as with the intense earnestness which characterized all the proceedings. It was, indeed, as General Caldwell so happily expressed it, the "refined gold of the West Virginia Democracy."

Never was there a more thoroughly representative convention held in any state. It was composed of men from every walk of life, and was a sufficient answer to the charge of the Popocratic demagogues that the sound money Democracy is made up of the moneyed classes. One thing in connection with the convention was that it was not composed of professional politicians and office-seekers. These classes were conspicuous only by their absence.

On the other hand, it was a body of more than three hundred earnest, substantial, intellectual citizens, representing thirty-five counties of the state, who were acting on the dictates of their consciences, men who believe in the time-honored principles of the party in which they were born and reared.

Those principles had been surrendered for a passing craze, dangerous in its purpose and destructive and disruptive in its effects. These men had been taught to believe, and did believe, that the honor and credit of the country should be meretriciously guarded, and when these virtues were threatened by the new and strange Democracy, it was their duty, as honest, patriotic Democratic citizens, to come to the rescue.

They met the situation firmly and courageously, and took the course which in their opinion will be most effective in contributing to avert the danger menacing the financial honor of the people and the very stability of the government itself.

There are some Democrats who are so intensely in earnest in their desire to do their part in this crisis that they will make their votes count for their full value by voting directly for the Republican ticket, which stands pledged for honest money and against repudiation and the step toward communism taken at Chicago. We regret that all patriotic Democrats cannot see their way to do this, but since they cannot, then their action which looks to the next best thing is worthy of commendation as being good citizenship.

The convention of Saturday took a decisive step toward giving its aid in placing West Virginia on the side of the national honor. It spoke for sound money of the very soundest kind, and against the proposition to debase our currency, and thus bring financial disaster and suffering to the common people, the great producing classes of the country—the men and women who work for wages, but are just now being appealed to for their votes by demagogues who hold out to them bright promises that will prove as shallow as the pretense that free silver is to benefit the people and not the millionaire owner of the silver mines.

That the organization effected in the Opera House will prove a potent factor in the campaign in this state cannot be doubted. No effort to belittle the movement, no amount of sneering from the Popocratic organs and leaders, no amount of abuse will avert it from its purpose. It will accomplish the good it desires to accomplish, and will do its part to save the country at a critical time, just as on another occasion the patriots of the Democratic party joined in the work of rescue when the national life was threatened.

Something to Bear in Mind.

To the Editor of the Intelligencer.
SIR:—One of the sound money arguments is that depositors in savings banks, members of building and loan associations, holders of life insurance policies, etc., will, if free silver prevails, lose about half of their savings by being repaid in fifty-cent dollars. Is this true?

WORKINGMAN.

It is true in a sense, but it should not be misunderstood. It is not meant by this that the banks, loan associations and insurance companies would take advantage of their patrons in this matter, for they would suffer themselves in the same proportion. Every dollar so invested would be returned to the depositor and investor dollar for dollar, just as it is now, but as we would be on a silver basis, gold being practically driven out by the cheaper money, the purchasing power of the silver dollar would be reduced one half.

This would be the inevitable result of the free and unlimited coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1. The fiat of the government could not prevent it, though some free silverites claim to think that it could.

By depreciating our money every man who has a dollar invested or loaned would be made to suffer the loss to the amount of depreciation, for the purchasing power of his money would be reduced that amount. All would suffer alike. Living would be twice as high, the dollar would buy less and be just as hard to get as it is now. It is because the banks desire to protect their customers that they are pretty generally found on the side of the honest dollar.

While this is all true, it would be the height of absurdity for any one to withdraw his investments of the character mentioned above, or to refrain from continuing to apply his savings in that way. Suppose a man were to withdraw what he has in a savings bank, for fear he would some day have to accept it in depreciated money, and should deposit it in a strong box at home. That would not save it from the effect of free silver, for it would depreciate in purchasing power in that strong box just as rapidly and just as much as it would in the bank or building association, and its owner would be losing the interest all the while. Besides, there is the constant danger of it being stolen or burned up in a fire.

The best thing for every workingman, or any other man who is saving money, to do is to go right ahead maintaining the financial confidence of the country by making his weekly deposits in the banks, and then in November go to the polls and vote against the thing which would cut down the value of his savings.

That is the only sure way to maintain sound money and avoid the danger of a panic. Confidence is everything—confidence in our present American dollar, confidence in our banking and other financial institutions, and confidence that the sound judgment and patriotism of the people will be sufficient to vote down once and forever the free silver heresy, which misguided men, backed by wealthy silver kings, are trying to force upon the country.

Newspaper men who have accompanied Mr. Bryan on his tour of New York give it as the result of careful observation that his trip has not been as effective as one might suppose. They declare that the great crowds that have flocked to see Bryan have mostly been drawn by curiosity to see a Presidential candidate. The button peddlers who have also followed the party have disposed of more McKinley buttons in the crowds than they have sold Bryan buttons.

Li Hung Chang seems to have caught on to the American way of doing things, and is exhibiting no little tact in adapting himself to his surroundings in New York.

BRYAN'S OWN ADVICE.

Being Followed by the Honest Money Democrats.

Cincinnati Times-Star: In an editorial in the Omaha World-Herald of February 26, 1896, Mr. Bryan, then editor of the paper, said:

"The World-Herald holds that the individual member of a party at all times reserves the right to vote against a nominee of a party and to abandon his party entirely whenever in his judgment it is his duty to his country requires it. If abandonment of party is ever justifiable, the voter must determine for himself when the time for abandonment arrives. When should he decide? The proper time, if not the only time, is after the party has adopted its platform and named its candidate. Until that time he does not know whether he can rely upon it to secure the government which he regards as good or the legislation which he considers necessary."

And the writer proceeds to argue that participating in a primary or in a convention does not bind the voter to support the policy which it may adopt. The editorial makes good reading for the Democratic editors who are just now abusing the bolters from the Bryan ticket. The sound money Democrats are simply acting on Bryan's own advice.

OPINIONS OF MCKINLEY'S LETTER.

"Let us hold fast to that which we know is good," is McKinley's motto, as conveyed in his letter, while that of Bryan is "Let us kick over everything, the currency, the industries, the supreme court, and take chances on something else." This suggests more excitement than the people want at this time.—New York Advertiser (Rep.).

Major McKinley's letter of acceptance is filled with valuable explanations and convincing arguments covering many points that are of the extreme importance to American voters, but nothing in his able and powerful letter is more worthy of careful attention than his warning against this irredeemable paper which the Bryans and the Albiges plan to issue.—New York Press (Rep.).

On the money question the argument is very lucid and very sound. Although we "take no stock" in international bimetallicism, looking upon it as a vain effort to grasp the moonbeams reflected in a pool of water, we are aware that both parties have been committed to it and that the Republican party is still committed to it. In the very worst aspect it is harmless, and there is no reason for objecting to anything Mr. McKinley says on this branch of the subject.—New York Post (Dem.).

William McKinley has again justified the action of the Republican national convention in nominating him for the chief magistracy. His letter of acceptance is an exceptionally able document. It is worthy to rank with the very best productions of American statesmanship, and will find a permanent place in the political literature of the nation.—New York Mail and Express (Rep.).

While few sound money Democrats who incline to vote for McKinley on the single issue of maintaining public and private credit, can approve his views on the tariff as given in his letter of acceptance, all who are sincere in regarding the question of sound money as paramount will not be influenced in their political action by his expressions on the tariff. He has doubtless strengthened his cause materially, especially in the states west of the Pennsylvania and Ohio line, by making the tariff an issue second only to that of sound money; and as the question of tariff is of no consequence whatever until the national credit is fully established, all patriotic citizens can well afford to postpone the discussion of that question until we have a government whose credit is beyond the reach of the revolutionist.—Philadelphia Times (Ind. Dem.).

Between McKinley's letter in the morning and General Harrison's speech in the evening, Bryan's poor little handful of wormy chestnuts on Thursday were caught between the upper and nether millstones and ground to powder. The dispatches of the day read in consecutive order show how wretchedly weak and indefensible the silver cause is when put to the test of public discussion.—Cincinnati Times-Star (Rep.).

Major McKinley didn't find it necessary to travel to New York to be notified and make his speech. He stood on his front porch and spoke, and the whole country heard him. That's the kind of a voice he has.—Philadelphia Press (Rep.).

FOR SOUND MONEY.

Meeting at Weston Addressed by Ex-Senator Campbell.

WESTON, W. Va., August 28.—Hon. A. R. Campbell spoke to a good-sized audience here to-night, and no speech of the campaign has been more universally commended. He showed clearly that no good could possibly come to West Virginia from free silver coinage. His handling of the Popocratic doctrine that the poor should array themselves against the rich brought forth the most hearty applause.

Consultation with any bank official would divulge the fact that the poor and those in moderate financial circumstances are they who most frequently have long time deposits, and even many stock-holders in banks or other corporations or joint stock companies are among the common people. A stroke at these corporations would fall most heavily on those who are least able to bear it. This was Mr. Campbell's tenth speech in this county. He has done good work for the cause of sound money in this locality.

A local Democratic politician, who is seeking notoriety, by challenging every Republican candidate who comes this way, made some interruptions at one of his meetings, but was quickly disposed of, and when told that he could have the joint discussion which he affected, to desire so much at this place to-night, he promised to be on hand, but he took a handy headache at once and his present whereabouts are unknown. REPUBLICAN.

The Mikado.

Charleston Evening Mail: The Mikado of the Democratic state committee arrived last night in the capital city, and as soon as his coming had been properly heralded the routine of Nankipoo, Lord High Executioners and coat and hat holders gathered about him, and his hours of visitation will be his interesting and animated. Boss Edmiston wears his new honors with becoming dignity. The fact that he was able to overthrow the Mac-Corkle-Chilton dynasty and force candidate Watts to accept the terms dictated by his anti-convention opponents has not elevated the Weston managers in any outward dimension that is discernible to the naked eye. Chairman Edmiston, it is understood is here to listen. With his good right and left ears he will permit the untoward elements to offer their suggestions as to what should and what should not be done in order to save the country. Then he and Colonel Ohley and Colonel McGraw will shape events to suit themselves, and the campaign for Bryan and repudiation will go forward. Chairman Edmiston will be boss of this campaign. He will permit the other fellows to talk, but he will do the acting.

Dayton at Thomas.

Special Correspondence.
THOMAS, W. Va., Aug. 30.—Hon. A. G. Dayton spoke to about 400 people here last night, composed principally of coal miners and lumbermen. Mr. Dayton made one of his best efforts, and held the crowd in wrapped attention, once or twice when he was interrupted by E. J. Mann and about 15 other drunken fellows, who tried hard to show their assinine qualities. Noon, like a great many other fellows of his class, believes himself smart, and hasn't sense enough to know he is a fool. He was promptly "called down" by the speaker.

How Does This Strike You?

The disappointment of the silver men over Bryan's Madison Square speech is explained by the Prentiss (Miss.) Plain Dealer (Bryan Dem.) "on the ground that they were expecting an oratorical effort and were given a rush of the free silver arguments instead. The leaders of the Democratic hosts," the Plain Dealer says, "should try to realize that this is a campaign of sentiment, and not of argument. Bryan gave it that complexion in his Chicago speech, and it is now impossible to change the programme. Stick to sentiment and we will win; ascend to logic and argument and the whole business will be swamped. The masses against the classes is the war cry."
